Program:

This presentation will focus on the unique responsibility of managing presidential records: Obligations under the Presidential Records Act, technological challenges of both paper and electronic records, adapting records management practices to each new administration and dealing with the upheaval of a Presidential transition. Philip will touch on the changes in White House records over the past 29 years and what happens to the records once a president leaves office.

Speaker:

Philip Droege currently serves as the Director of the White House Office of Records Management. He grew up in the Maryland suburbs of Washington, DC and graduated from Concordia College in Seward, Nebraska in 1989. Mr. Droege started his professional life as a high school teacher on Long Island, New York. In July of 1990 he moved back to Washington, DC to take a job in the White House as a Records Technician. During his 29 years in the Office of Records Management, he has served in five Presidential Administrations as a Records Analyst, Supervisor, Deputy Director and his current position as Director, which he has held since 2004.

Mr. Droege and his wife, Kate, have four daughters, Grace (20), Alice (18), Lucy (15) and Eleanor (13).
